BRITAIN MAY OFFER PLANS
FOR CRUISERSSuggestion, if Adopted,
May Save Conference's Utility

(By the Associated Press.)

The fate of the Geneva naval conference was hanging in the balance today.

At Geneva the conference was generally regarded in a critical if not hopeless situation with the only ray of light suggestions that the British are still open to new proposals if they do not affect the fundamentals of the British plan.

The British cabinet was hastily summoned in London.

Official circles in Washington forecast an adjournment of the conference without agreement.

London, July 29—(AP)—The British cabinet convened late this afternoon after having been hastily summoned.

It was reported that the reason for the hurried meeting was the position which has arisen at Geneva.

Geneva, July 29—(AP)—A suggestion which the British claim might solve the difficulty over eight inch gun cruisers and by the same token save the naval conference emanated today from British circles.

It was that the American delegation ask for the right to build more eight inch gun secondary cruisers than is provided under the British plan submitted yesterday and that the British would look favorably upon such a proposal provided the British total tonnage in cruisers was raised in proportion.

Under this plan the United States probably would build three or four inch cruisers to counterbalance the British cruiser York and four British cruisers of the Hawkins class, it was said.

To Show Way Out.

This latest British suggestion, is said to constitute the willingness of the British to discuss America's right to construct four or five additional warships of this type.

Meanwhile there was a possibility that the projected plenary session called for Monday may not be held until Wednesday. Hugh S. Gibson, chief of the American delegation for one, wants ample time to exchange messages with Washington.

Contemplate Effects.

Washington, July 29—(AP)—With adjournment of the naval conference without agreement on a limitations treaty forecast in official circles here, speculation as to the probable course of the administration in dealing with naval expansion at congress already is being discussed.

There is no indication that President Coolidge and his advisers have as yet taken up the formulation of a continuing building program for the fleet.

All officials appear to agree that the failure of the Geneva conversations would place a weapon of extraordinary value in the hands of the "big navy" men in congress. The exact effect it would have on what congress does with relation to the cruiser program of the administration is not possible of determination in advance of the assembling of the new congress.

Administration officials who will comment do not believe that President Coolidge will not approve any building program aimed at the British fleet.

The British proposals were taken up for examination this morning by Secretary Kellogg and Wilbur, Admiral Eberle, chief of naval operations and other naval officials.

A big audience in the county court room this morning at about the time for the calling of the case against Milton A. MRS. LESTER HENDRICKS AND EIGHT-YEAR-OLD DAUGHTER
AMONG 27 WHO LOST LIVES WHEN EXCURSION STEAMER
SANK IN SUDDEN SQUALL OFF LINCOLN PARK, CHICAGOOne Daughter Saved; Husband on Bank
Saw Tragedy

Mrs. Lester Hendricks of Sterling and an eight-year-old daughter, Mary, were among the 27 pleasure-seekers who lost their lives when the steamer Favorite was overtaken by a sudden squall on Lake Michigan, off Lincoln Park, Chicago, late Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Hendricks was known in Dixon, having sung at numerous functions here a number of years ago as a member of the Wilcox Trio, an organization composed of herself and two sisters.

Her husband, who is a member of the Hendricks drug company of Sterling, and their son were standing on the shore watching the boat when it turned over, carrying Mrs. Hendricks and two daughters down with it.

The other girl was rescued.

The story of the tragedy is told in the following Associated Press account:

Chicago, July 29—(AP)—A sudden off-shore squall that soon passed, capsize a small excursion steamer late yesterday carrying 27 passengers, mostly women and children, to death. The tragedy came almost twelve years to a day after the sinking of the Eastland with 812 deaths. Both were caused by the rush of passengers to the port side.

Sixteen of the victims were children—ten boys and six girls. Ten were women and one a man. Some 75 women and children and half a dozen men were thrown into the water when the Favorite—toppled over, but 50 or more were saved, some to a thrilling rescue by William Hofnauer, millionaire yachtsman, who chanced to be cruising near in his large yacht, the Doris.

Derricks Lift Craft

While divers searched for more victims, derricks lifted the craft seven hours after the sinking. The last five bodies were found as the ship came up.

It was a gay crowd of excursionists that left Lincoln Park for the two mile run to the Municipal Pier.

A two piece negro orchestra—banjo and mandolin—strummed "I'm Looking Over a Four Leaf Clover" as suddenly, when a mile out, a rainstorm broke under a gust of wind from the northwest. As the captain, Arthur Olson, a lake seaman for 18 years, sought to head his boat into the wind, passengers rushed to the port side away from the rain. The boat dipped and as water rushed over the decks, turned turtle.

Some Thrown Free

Children, candy and popcorn still clutched in their hands, fought to free themselves. Some were thrown free of the boat and many grabbed belts and rafts as the steamer righted and sank until all but the canopy was submerged.

Twenty-one bodies were recovered before the steamer was raised.

The five members of the crew escaped and these, all experienced sailors, saved many from drowning by tossing life preservers and rafts to them. The ship's two life boats also were unleashed and into these clambered some survivors.

Word of the tragedy sped along the lake front and small boats put out to the rescue.

First to reach the scene was the Doris. Hofnauer and his companions saved a number of persons.

Inquiry Under Way

Today a triple inquiry was under way. One was an inquest, the others by Michael Hughes, chief of police and State's Attorney Crowe. Olson and his crew were arrested.

Survivors of the tragedy today still were over-awed by the suddenness of the squall which sank the boat with little warning.

Members of the crew also blamed the suddenness of the storm, deprecating it gave them no time to direct a systematic disposal of the life preservers.

Catherine Olson, small daughter of the ship's captain said the weather was ideal when the boat started. Sudden clouds gathered and the storm broke, waves dashing high against the ship. Lightning flashed and rain fell in torrents, the child said, sending passengers scurrying to the opposite side of the boat to avoid the storm.

Girl Tells of Storm

"The boat began to tip," she said, "and the scores of children began to cry. I was afraid too. I saw one big wave dash against the boat and fall back. Then came another but this time it splashed over the deck and drenched us all."

"I don't remember the rest very well. There was a lot of terrible howling and I remember falling into the lake and felt the bottom with my feet. I came up and paddled and paddled, managing to keep up until somebody picked me up."

Among the witnesses of the tragedy was L. B. Hendricks of Sterling, husband and father of two of the victims. He said he had decided not to make the trip and was waiting on shore while his wife and two daughters took the excursion. He said he was still watching the boat as the squall hit it. Seeing it topple over he paced the beach frantically until rescuers began arriving with survivors and victims. He collapsed when he recognized his wife and one daughter among the dead. He later was reunited with his other daughter, who had been rescued.

The Favorite, with the top canopy of the upper deck just awash, proved her seaworthiness after the disaster by floating just above the sandy bottom so that slings from the crane were easily slipped underneath. When the crane had lifted it until the main deck was out of the water, life guards swarmed aboard to search her and find the last of the passengers, two women and three children floating in the main cabin.

A fire tug dropped a hose aboard and quickly emptied the hull from which the engine crew has escaped before the Favorite capsized.

Woman's Second Escape.

A mother of five, Mrs. Gertrude Bern, who also was aboard the Eastland when it capsized, again escaped death. Four members of her family, a married daughter, a granddaughter, nephew and sister-in-law were drowned.

The body of a boy about eight years old, the 27th victim, was found several hours later along the shore where it had been washed.

The only victim not identified was a small girl about 8 years old.

Many Heroic Acts.

Out of the sudden disaster came acts of heroism and devotion. Captain Olson, at the wheel, leaped through a cabin window into the water, turning back to drag several passengers from the boat. He also cut away preservers, tossing them to floundering persons. His daughter, Katherine, 12, also assisted several children.

Leo Sobota, an army officer, whose hand was mangled, told of throwing four children into a boat.

"I got four kids and a woman," he said. "The boat was full of water and we couldn't get any more in. A girl started bailing with a straw hat. I was dizzy."

Captain Prostrated.

"It was terrible. I wish I had gone down with the boat," Captain Olson murmured as he watched his steaming being raised. "It's horrible—horrible, I tell you," Olson shouted. "I did the best I could—I tell you I was in a terrible and I have only recently spent a lot of money improving the Favorite."

Sixteen-year-old George Holmes of Berwyn saved his father and attempted to rescue his mother, but she had died from shock and heart disease.

As rescue work got under way, Commodore Eugene McDonald, sportsman and sailor, reached the scene and he was one of the first of Negligence or Law Violation

Chicago, July 29—(AP)—A preliminary investigation by the state's attorney failed to disclose evidence of criminal negligence or violation of any state law, it was revealed today as four inquiries were under way into the capsizing of the Favorite, small excursion steamer, yesterday in Lake Michigan with a loss of 27 lives.

The sudden squall as a thunderstorm broke the heat wave, turned the little steamer partly over, throwing women and children into the water as others were trapped below decks.

Rotten straps on life preservers comprised one of the first discoveries by Coroner Wolff in an inspection of the boat today. The craft had been raised and towed in. One life preserver bore a date of 1910 and a 1927 inspection stamp.

Seek Other Bodies

Federal inspectors, the state's attorney, the coroner and the police launched a quadruple inquiry as divers and harbor craft continued to drag the waters in search of other bodies.

Approximately 75 persons were aboard the steamer.

The coroner asked a number of licensed skippers, prominent men of experience on the lakes, to sit on the jury.

State's Attorney Crowe directed his assistants to open an inquiry at once. After questioning a number of persons, W. A. Rittenhouse, assistant state's attorney, announced that no evidence of any violation of law had been uncovered.

Inspected July 11

Fred Men, representing the federal steamboat inspection service, with local inspectors, began an inspection of the Favorite. He said the steamer was last inspected July 11.

The coroner, in addition to finding some life belts with straps which he tore with ease, said some of the life preservers apparently were not easily accessible.

Although the authorities were without information as to the exact number of persons aboard and no authentic list of missing persons was reported, search of the lake waters went ahead today without finding other bodies.

No Blame on Crew

Survivors questioned at the state's attorney's office placed no blame on the captain or crew.

The local Red Cross is in communication with the families of the victims, but found only one case where financial assistance may be necessary.

Inspector Meno said he was convinced the boat was seaworthy and in good condition when it set out on its trip.

The steering apparatus and compass still functioned excellently; he declared and the only damage to the boat was caused by foundering and by the axes of the rescuers.

SATURDAY FINAL DAY OF ASSEMBLY PROGRAMS HERE

Unusually Fine Entertainments Featured the Chautauqua

SATURDAY
2:30 p. m.—Concert, The Theodora Concert Company. Vocal and instrumental.

7:45 p. m.—Concert, The Theodora Concert Company.

8:45 p. m.—Lecture, "Fiddling While the World Burns." Dr. Ira Landrith. A fine lecture dealing with world problems.

The annual Dixon Independent Chautauqua, which has provided exceptionally high class entertainment for many patrons at the Rock River Assembly auditorium all this week, will come to an end with the programs tomorrow afternoon and evening, and the promoters and many who have attended are encouraged by the interest shown, and are hopeful that another similar series of entertainments can be arranged for next summer.

Two high class attractions are on the program for tomorrow, the closing day. The Theodora Concert Co., which will present vocal and instrumental concerts afternoon and evening, is an organization of five talented musicians under the management and direction of Mme. Rita Rheodora, who has recently returned from Italy. Their programs tomorrow will consist of vocal solos and duets, instrumental and ensemble music.

Dr. Ira Landrith, internationally known lecturer, college president, editor and churchman, will close the chautauqua with his famous lecture "Fiddling While the World Burns." Dr. Landrith's lecture abounds in wit, humor, logic and eloquence, and is sure to delight and instruct the large audience which is expected to attend the closing session.

Heard Little Reader
An unexpected pleasure was given the big audience at Thursday evening's entertainment in the unprogrammed appearance of little Caroline Baltzell of Chicago, a ten year old reader, who, with her mother, is visiting at the home of her grandparents in this city.

The little miss, who gives promise of a great career as an elocutionist, gave three readings—one in Dutch costume, one in evening dress and the third in bridal fitting—and she displayed excellent diction, remarkable platform decorum and pleasing gestures. Her readings were given as a prelude to the final appearance of The Playcraft Co., which gave another perfect performance in their comedy "Aunt Carrie Comes to Town."

Los Angeles, July 29—(AP)—Aimee McPherson declared today that "there is no thought of an immediate change" at her Angelus Temple here, although she announced publicly last night she was going to resign as leader of the Temple and move to other fields of evangelism.

Mrs. McPherson said last night her resignation would be placed in the hands of the church committee to take effect as soon as a suitable leader could be found. Today her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, commented: "There's no reason to be alarmed. This is at least the sixth time she has said she would resign."

Los Angeles, July 29—(AP)—The Times says Aimee McPherson will surrender control of Angelus Temple as soon as her position as pastor can be filled and the present squabble between the evangelist and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, can be settled.

Turn between her desire to continue her work here and the wish to engage in world evangelistic work, the evangelist said she had made her choice and would leave Los Angeles, according to the Times.

"It will be necessary for me to remain in charge until the unfortunate difficulties between the church and my mother have been settled," Mrs. McPherson said. "I am hoping that a new leader can be found and that the church difficulties can be straightened out during the next three weeks."

The Rev. Marvin Craig of Des Moines, Ia., may be the choice of the retiring pastor as her successor, she said.

"It seems that ever since I escaped from those who kidnapped me, I have been the center of a storm created by outside influences," Mrs. McPherson said.

She said she had not yet revealed her future plans to either her mother or her congregation or the church committee.

My faithful child, I have no song to give you;
No lark could pipe to stars so dull and gray;
Yet, ere part, one lesson I can leave you

Be good, sweet maid, and let who will be clever;
Do noble things, not dream them, all day long;
And so make life, death, and that vast forever

One grand sweet song.

Menus for the Family

BY SISTER MARY.

BREAKFAST—Fresh prunes, cereal, cream, crisp broiled bacon, creamed eggs, toast, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Salmon and green pea salad, rye bread, sour cream pie, milk, tea.

DINNER—Broiled Spanish mackerel, baked new potatoes, beet greens garnished with hard cooked eggs, banana and orange salad, brown Betty, milk, coffee.

Oven-broiled bacon is sure to prove popular. The bacon should be placed on a rack over a pan. The regulation broiler of the average gas range fits the oven, but if one does not have this, an ordinary flat broiler can be supported on a pan so that the bacon cooks in the oven, the pan receives the bacon "drippings" and the bacon is held quite above them.

When the cream sours, sour cream pie will be a treat.

Sour Cream Pie.

One cup sour cream, 1/2 cup sugar, 2 eggs, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1 cup seed, 1/2 cup finely diced apples, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon cinnamon.

Beat yolks of eggs until light. Add cream. Mix and sift sugar, flour, salt and cinnamon. Add raisins and apples and mix thoroughly. Add to eggs and cream. Mix well and turn into a pie dish lined with pastry. Bake ten minutes in a hot oven. Reduce heat and bake until firm in a moderately slow oven. It will take about 30 minutes. Beat whites of eggs until stiff and dry. Beat in 4 tablespoons sugar and 1/4 teaspoon vanilla. Cover pie with meringue and bake in a slow oven for eight minutes. Serve cold.

A POET COUNSELS STATESMEN.

Poets are generally accepted with lifted eyebrows by the great, strong, silent men who believe they hold the world's destiny within their hands.

Men who are not poets, however, but pride themselves on their practicability, could well listen to Dennis McCarthy, one of the great living Irish poets, as he speaks on a matter which he seems to believe he can express more strongly in prose than verse.

McCarthy speaks of the murder of Kevin O'Higgins, "strong man of the Irish Free State."

"It would be a mistake," says McCarthy, "to believe this deed authorized by political parties. In an atmosphere of intense political bitterness, there may always be found irresponsible men who, seeking the nearest way to a desired end, are moved without much hesitation to bloodshed.

"If each of the parties in Ireland could muzzle its own wild men and women, and if the same muzzling could be applied in America, also, the atmosphere would be cleared of its miasmatic vapors, and a saner and healthier state of public opinion would result in Ireland any everywhere."

If this poet's truth about "irresponsible men" born and bred everywhere through no fault of the leaders of various movements were really accepted, fewer national hatreds and wars would be bred.

A KING IS PINCHED.

The King of Belgium, Albert by name, was arrested for speeding in the city of Spa, Belgium, a day or so ago.

Spa insists on a speed limit of 10 kilometers, or about six miles an hour, and since it is impossible for any continental car to go that slowly, Spa is quite able to pay for good roads by speed fines.

King Albert seemed to be doing a daytime Haroun Al Raschid stunt by driving a friend's car. However, even when assured that his victim was the king, the cop continued making out his report, and the king will be fined unless the communal court relents.

There are very few towns in America, Democracy and Republic, where the town mayor, councilman, leading ministers or bootleggers can really be brought to time for speeding. And one shudders at the very thought of President Coolidge being arrested anywhere for anything.

But then, we're only a Democracy. The king got arrested and had to take his desserts along with the humblest citizen in a Monarchy. There's a difference.

LABELING DIVORCEES.

Here's a cause waiting for a champion. The cause is battle against "divorce rings."

Divorce rings, be it known, as sponsored by Paris, city of divorcees, are gold or platinum circlets engraved with two hands, not clasped, but back to back, around a ruby or diamond emerald or pearl or some other bauble precious enough to make a merry jingle-jingle in a jeweler's coffers.

Battle must be done, for how can the cause of marriage ever compete with the cause of divorce, when the former gets merely an engraved circlet with possibly a few infinitesimal diamond chips thrown in, whereas divorce gets a ring with a really big precious stone and chic engraving in the shape of hands that are mad at each other, and keep their backs turned?

Here's grist for the Sunday sermon and the anti-divorce homily!

SPENDING MEANS THRIFT.

Most wage earners who have a real struggle keeping body and soul together are quite familiar with the adage, "It isn't what you earn, but what you save that counts."

William A. Schneider, counselor on personal financial problems to the employees of a big electric manufacturing company, disagrees.

In discussing how to get ahead financially, he advocates spending—judicious spending which constitutes in the final essence, saving. He advocates spending for life insurance, for a home, for education, for investments.

Incidentally, Mr. Schneider's position is sufficiently unique and yet so obviously worth while that one wonders why other firms haven't thought to provide "personal financial counselors" for their employees, thus cashing in on the idea that the unworried and contented employe means fat coffers for the employer.

Women made books in the middle ages, says a headline. We saw a wedding the other day and are moved by the thought that there still are some pretty game gamblers among them.

With no more Americans planning to fly to Europe right away, the mayors of the small towns of France can retire now with hopes for a full night's sleep.

A Texan has managed to keep awake 150 hours by drink-coffee and smoking cigarettes. Just the man for a job as claquer for a grand opera company.

A Minnesota town held a lawn-mowing contest. At last a chance to put young brother's hair grease to something useful.

The Goofy-Goos were queer to see, as black as anyone could be. Said Clowzy, "Say, who are you tots, and why do you live here?" "We're licorice candy," one replied. "In candy stores we're often spied. Of course we're very harmless, so we bring no cause for fear."

Then Coppy laughed aloud and said, "You all know how to raise much Ned. I think you fought a dandy fight with us a while ago." A licorice baby, mid a grin, replied, "We did not hope to win. You Tinymites all looked so big, we knew we had no show."

Then Scouty cried, "Oh, why discuss that fight? 'Twas just a friendly fuss. I think we'd all be wiser if we'd quiet down and rest." And thus it was the Tinies' bunch all carried out wee Scouty's hunch. They flopped down in the grass and soon with restful sleep were blest.

The Goofy-Goos stood 'round a while and then one broke into a smile. "Let's let the Tinies have their sleep. They'll soon wake up much cheered." The rest agreed that that was wise, and as the leader winked his eyes, the little band jumped up and ran and shortly disappeared.

Wee Clowzy sure knew how to snore, and in about an hour or more, the raspy noise woke Scouty up. Then he woke all the rest. "Jump up," he shouted, "Let's all search for Goofy-Goos. We're in the lurch. They've left us and they must have gone to east, north, south or west."

Just at this moment, though, there came a noise. A rabbit was to blame. It hopped around right near the bunch, as if in quite a race. And then quite suddenly it stopped and on its back the Tinies hopped, and 'ere the bunch all knew it, they were sailing out through space.

SAINT and SINNER

At luncheon that day, Kate Lundy, whom none of the family except Cherry thought of as an ordinary servant, made an unexpected remark as she stirred her tall glass of iced tea vigorously. Mrs. Lundy had been in the habit of having her luncheon with Faith and Cherry and Mr. Lane. If he happened to be at home at that hour. Today Faith found her presence strangely comforting. It kept her from thinking too much of Bob and Cherry, alone in Bob's offices, in the congenial intimacy of employer and private secretary.

"What you need, Miss Hathaway, is to get out more. Why don't you dress up about four o'clock this afternoon and pay some calls on the ladies in the neighborhood?"

Faith flushed, and the hand that reached for the bowl of combination salad trembled slightly. "I do owe three or four calls," she acknowledged. "But I—there's the baby, you know, and Cherry will be wanting another of those dresses made this week—"

"Oh, dear Cherry!" Kate Lundy retorted with a snort. "And I'll keep an eye on the baby."

"You—you're awfully good to me," Faith began, then her voice broke into sobs. In a moment she was weeping on Kate Lundy's broad bosom; a horny old hand was stroking her hair.

"There, now, honey! Cry as much as you want to," Kate Lundy soothed her. "Reckon every girl that gets married has to go through a few cry-in' days. But you got a mighty fine husband, Miss Hathaway. Cry right on, honey. It'll do you good."

But as usual, when a woman is encouraged to cry her tears dry up. Faith looked up into the broad, homely face with a smile quivering on her lips. "I didn't mean to act like a baby," she tried to laugh. "Oh Mrs. Lundy, tell me! Do you—do you think he really loves me?" She wanted to ask, "As much as he loves Cherry?" but her lips would not utter the disloyal words.

"Sure he does!" Mrs. Lundy reassured her vigorously, a little too vigorously, Faith thought fearfully. "Of course he ain't the romantic kind, but I'll take the good solid, substantial men any time. That man'd do anything in the world for you, Miss Hathaway, and you don't need to be afraid he'll chase around after other women. He ain't that sort."

So Kate Lundy was thinking of —Cherry, too, Faith told herself desolately.

"Now, if I was you," Kate went on with forced cheerfulness, "I'd have me a real good time this afternoon—gossip with the neighbors, take your sewing along, exchange a few recipes, invite some nice young couple over to play bridge this evening or to dance. You musn't let yourself get in a rut, you know. Tell you what, I'll do—I'll make up a batch of my raisin-nut cookies and a lot of them minced olive and cream cheese sandwiches and you can have a little jump-up party this evening to surprise Mr. Hathaway. Now you go and lie down and rest, and I'll be right back."

have your flowered voile pressed real nice for you by the time you wake up. Don't worry about the Midget. Her and me understand each other."

Faith found that it was very pleasant to be ordered about for her own good. And she obeyed as docilely as a child. It was three o'clock when she woke from the nap she had not believed she would be able to enjoy, with her heart as sore as it was. After a cool bath—already drawn and faintly scented with some of Cherry's violet bath salts, which Mrs. Lundy had had no compunction in using—she dressed herself carefully in the thin, flowered voile, white shoes and stockings, and her wide-brimmed straw hat, faced with pale pink chiffon which made her skin look lovely, and, feeling pleasantly excited, set out to pay her calls.

TOMORROW: Faith finds that she must suffer the consequences of Cherry's sins and notoriety.

GIANTS AND CARDS BECOMING MENACE TO THE LEADERS

Pirates and Cubs Unable to Advance in Great Race

(BY THE AP)
In the nip and tuck scramble in the National League, a sport by the Giants today had pulled them up to six and one half games from the lead. The Giants bowled over the Cubs for their fourth consecutive victory yesterday by 6 to 5; thwarting efforts of the Bruins to jockey into a first place clinch with the Corsairs, who in turn were tumbled by the Robins 7-5.

Rogers Hornsby hastened the Chicago downfall by producing his 17th homer with one on.

Cincinnati clung to its one point grip on 5th place by beating Boston 11-6.

A six run rally in the eighth allowed the Cardinals to top the Phillies by 10-8. Cy Williams got two homers. He now has 22.

The Yanks kept breezing along in the American League walkway by beating the Browns 9-4. Ruth left Gehrig behind in the home run gallop by hanging out number 34.

Detroit made it three out of five in the series by beating the Athletics 5-2.

The Red Sox maintained their recent reversal of form by whacking out a double triumph over Cleveland 3-0 and 4-3.

Walter Johnson was in great form, holding the White Sox to six hits while Washington registered a 12 to 2 victory.

Helen Wills Beats Other Helen Easily
Manchester, Mass., July 29—(AP)—Helen Wills of Berkeley, Calif., today defeated Helen Jacobs of the same city, 6-1, 6-2, in the tournament finals of the Essex County Club here.

Once more Miss Wills demonstrated her complete command of American woman's tennis by defeating her 18 year old fellow Californian, Miss Wills was master from the start. Miss Jacobs' service, which had counted largely in her victory over Mrs. Molla Mallory, national champion, on Wednesday, gave the Wimbledon champion no trouble.

HUTCHINSON AND EVANS TO ATTEND OREGON OPENING

Great Card is Planned for New Oregon Golf Club August 9

Jock Hutchinson, former British open golf champion with either Chick Evans, former national champion, or Laurie Ayton, professional at the Evanston country club, will appear in two foursomes at the official opening of the new course of the Rock river country club at Oregon on Tuesday, August 9.

Invitations have already been accepted by the editorial staff of the Golfers' magazine and dozens of other nationally known link enthusiasts to attend the all-day meet.

Opie Read, novelist and newspaper writer has not only promised to attend, but play at least one round and give an address.

CHICAGO TO GET BIG FIGHT IF IT REALLY WANTS IT

Such is Richard's Declaration After His First Meeting

Chicago, July 29—(AP)—Main details of the Dempsey-Tunney fight, if Chicago lands it for Soldier Field in September, are agreed upon and it remains only for Chicago's civic and business leaders today to convince Tex Rickard that Chicago means business and wants the match.

Rickard meets these leaders at a luncheon today. Preliminary conferences between Rickard and George F. Getz, millionaire coal operator and official representative of Mayor Thompson, have decided upon some of the arrangements subject to the actual agreement. Prices ranging from $5 to $40 tentatively have been set and the announcement, if it comes, will be made next Tuesday.

The mayor and Rickard will throw out the situation definitely next Monday.

"I have come to Chicago with an open mind on this business," Rickard said. "I'd like to put the fight on at Soldier Field but there are a lot of details to be ironed out. If Chicago really wants the fight, I guess there will not be much trouble about bringing it here."

By the Associated Press
New York — Paul Berlenbach knocked out Fighting Bob Lawson, Alabama (7); Martin Burke, New Orleans, defeated Lester Gaines, Toronto (10); Benny Touchstone, New York knocked out Romero Rojas, Chile (3).

Norwalk, Conn.—Tiger Flowers, Atlanta, Ga., beat Bill Conley, Lewiston, Maine (10).

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom.—Psalms xc:12.

Full oft we see cold wisdom waiting on superfluous folly.—Shakespeare.

MERIDIAN ROAD CELEBRATION IN ROCHELLE, OCT. 6

Day and Night Program to Mark Opening of Highway North

Rochelle—Thursday, October 6, has been selected by local business men and American Legion members as the date when the Meridian highway connecting Rochelle and Rockford with a ribbon of cement will be officially opened. The occasion will also mark the dedication of two giant "welcome" arches to be erected at the gateways of Rochelle on the route.

Mayor McHenry Chairman
Mayor Wilbur B. McHenry is in general charge of the arrangements, with District Commander George D. O'Brien looking after the Legion's part in the program. Local post officers have promised every assistance and veterans are represented on every committee that has been selected.

Three funds, in addition to a Scotch kiltie organization, have already been secured.

4 Drum Corps Entered
Commander O'Brien announced at a meeting of committees held Tuesday night that four crack drum corps from various parts in Illinois have already accepted invitations to appear in the monstrous parade that will feature the morning program at the celebration.

No expense is being spared in arranging the program and thousands of dollars are already in the hands of committees with orders to "spend liberally" in providing a program that will attract the largest crowd ever entertained in Rochelle.

Auxiliary to Aid
The American Legion auxiliary and members of women's fraternal and church organizations are to be in charge of feeding the huge throng and attending to the housing of visitors.

The decision to limit the celebration to one day was reached at last night's meeting after considerable discussion. A night fireworks program with proper ceremonies of lighting the new arches is also a new attraction announced.

State Officers Coming
Invitations have been extended Frank T. Sheets, state highway engineer, and Colonel Cornelius R. Miller, director of the state department of public works, as guests of honor at the opening. Other state officials have also promised to attend. The Rockford Chamber of Commerce has promised, through its secretary, Clarence Patrick, to lend every aid in the arrangements for the celebration and will send a huge caravan here for the program.

Drenching Rain is Help to Iowa's Corn
Des Moines, Iowa, July 28—(AP)—After sweltering yesterday in the year's record high temperature, Iowa last night received a drenching rain in the southwest and central portions that postponed any danger to crops from drought but failed to reach the parched northwest districts, where weather bureau authorities reported today. A maximum temperature of 101 degrees at Albia, the highest in the state was reported.

An Ex-Buck PRIVATE goes back to FRANCE

Calling attention to M. Frederick Valtier, the instructor at Eplonville, which was in the path of the 91st Division in 1918.

M. Valtier has been the instructor—the schoolmaster—at Eplonville for 22 years. Not continuous service, understand. Take four years out for the war, when the schoolhouse was used as a German headquarters. And another year for rebuilding the schoolhouse after the 91st Division artillery wrecked it according to the most complete plans of any visionary schoolboy.

When M. Valtier returned after the armistice he had to buy all the maps, pens and ink, books and slates for his 22 pupils. But that is not what M. Valtier is noted for. As the town's oldest instructor he had to live so he built a chicken coop for his chickens. Nothing extraordinary about that, either. But—

M. Valtier, being a conservative and somewhat of an inventor, ripped the nice, shiny patent leather visors from two German officers' helmets and there are now doing service as practical hinges on the door of that chicken coop out behind the schoolhouse.

Just ponder on that for a moment. Think of the salutes that were cranked down by respectful privates when those haughty helmets passed in their prime! Think of the answering salutes that were snapped off the rims of those visors by their automatic owners, strutting their stuff at a review, and of the orderlies who kept those helmets all trimmed up and burnished!

And now—nine years after the 91st went through without saluting—the visors of those helmets are being used as hinges on the door of the chicken coop of Monsieur Frederick Valtier, the fat and congenial instructor of Eplonville, France. The door will be swinging there in September, when the American Legion representatives pass through the town. And any one of them who pauses—and reflects—will get the humor, and the tragedy, that the schoolmaster has afforded.

DEATH OF KING LEFT HIS QUEEN RELATIVELY POOR

Queen Marie's Friends Seek Financial Aid from Government

Bucharest, July 28 (AP)—King Ferdinand's death has left Queen Marie relatively poor. Unless the state comes forward with help, she may be obliged to convert some of her jewels and other possessions into cash.

Ferdinand's fortune of about $1,500,000 will be apportioned among the King's five children including Prince Carol. The Queen, however, receives nothing beyond the use for life of certain of the King's properties and palaces.

Queen Marie is said to feel keen distress over her situation and efforts were started today by friends to induce the cabinet to recommend a liberal allowance.

It is true, friends said, that she will receive a fraction of the income from Ferdinand's property, but as the annual revenue from the King's holdings is less than $200,000 Marie's share is almost negligible.

IND. GOVERNOR TO RETURN FROM CAMP FOR FIGHT

Takes Gov. Small's Advice to Give Battle to Enemies

Indianapolis, Ind., July 28 (AP)—Interest today centered on the expected immediate return of Governor Jackson and to statements attributed to his friends that he was going to "fight to the last ditch."

Governor Jackson, whose absence from the party of Governors who visited Sault Ste Marie yesterday led to published rumors that he had met with a mishap, announced his intention to return from Mackinac Island to his home state, but he declined to comment on statements that the trip was to reply to attacks aimed at him in connection with the case against D. C. Stephenson.

Governor Small, a member of the party of governors was quoted as saying that both he and Governor

Jackson had received threatening letters and that he had advised the Indiana executive to return home, publish the letters and fight to the last ditch.

"I expect to do just as you say," Governor Small said Jackson replied. While sensational rumors were current at Mackinac Island yesterday concerning the Governor's safety, it developed that he had been fishing with his wife, two children and a friend.

To say "Malt is Malt" is as wrong as to say that Shoes are Shoes. There are here the proper selection of raw material, skill, experience, and honesty of the maker determine the quality of the ready product—and its price.

The manufacturers of "Homa" and "Special" have always given first consideration to quality, realizing that it is the predominating factor in building any business.

It is universally recognized that while "Homa" and "Special" are slightly higher they are ever so much more superior and more satisfying than the few cents difference would indicate.

When a Man Loves

By ALLIE LOWE MILES

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
John Barrymore in "WHEN A MAN LOVES" is a Warner Bros. Picture tization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood; but meets and loves Manon Lescaut, beautiful orphan, whose rascally brother, realizing her worldly value, bargains her for gold to Rancor, rich connoisseur of women. Fabien saves her and carries her off to Paris, where they wander into a boarding house and in a great and sacred love, live happily together though poor. While Fabien is out Manon's brother comes and bullies her into going with him. He changes her farewell note, so that it is cruel and final. Fabien returns.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued

In answer to Fabien's frenzied call, Marie, the maid, appeared, immediately, on the landing below and came up with a twisted, mocking smile on her face. Marie rejoiced in Fabien's anguish.
"Where is Manon?" Fabien's face was white, his eyes bloodshot. "Gone, likely with the rich gentleman who called for her," Marie's eyes were crafty.
"You lie!" came from Fabien through set jaw.
His face was livid and Marie ducked out of reach from upraised arms that threatened to strike her to the floor.
Gradually Fabien's awful rage ebbed away, leaving him weak and dazed. He was so pitifully young and deeply in love with Manon that Marie's implication had made him see red. Still he dared not recall the content of that note. It seemed impossible to Fabien that Manon had been unfaithful. He adored her, and had she not given sufficient proof of her love? She had hardly been out of his sight since their arrival in Paris—how could she know another man? In a flash Fabien was convinced that the Comte had discovered Manon's whereabouts and forced her to go away with him. Even this was a deathblow, because if true her fate would be unthinkable.

Fabien reread the note and was more distressed than ever. What a cruel message for Manon to leave! There was no doubt about it being her own writing. Apparently she had grown tired of him and their poverty. No, no, she had too recently lavished her caresses upon him for that to be true. Yet, the reality of her note remained to taunt him. Fabien paced the floor as though bereft of all reason.

He tossed the silver chain on the table beside his slippers. What a celebration to end their first week of love together! Unable to endure the solitary loneliness of their once happy abode, Fabien strode from the room and slammed the door.

The love nest was deserted. Would the world prove a kind place for the young ones who had gone forth so poorly prepared to meet the adventure and problems that awaited them?
Only Time could tell!

CHAPTER IX

When Lescaut finally succeeded in getting Manon out of the pension he welcomed the sight of a coach and quickly shoved her within its seclusion as Fabien passed by. It was a narrow escape. Besides Manon's protestations and tears were embarrassing and he did not want to attract attention. Also, he had to prepare her mind for what was to follow and he could not do it walking along the street.

"How silly to regret leaving a hovel like that! Dry your eyes and be ready to see the beautiful place I am taking you to. I have come into a little money and am living so handsomely that I want my little sister to share it with me." Lescaut spoke consolingly but he did not dare explain that the handsome home he referred to was the Comte's quarters and the money had been advanced by the amorous banker at the promise of Manon's deliverance into his hands. When they arrived at the great mansion, Manon was so impressed with its splendor that for a few moments she forgot all about her unceremonious farewell from Fabien. Never had she imagined there was so much wealth in the world. There seemed to be a cohort of liveried servants passing here and there through the great marble halls.

Manon thought that it was fortunate for her brother to have inherited or acquired so much money. She did not stop to think just where it came from or that such sudden affluence was impossible. Her mind was again on Fabien and she thought how happy they would be in a place like this. Manon was terribly hurt and angry that Andre was selfish enough not to include him.

The boudoir that proved to be Manon's was a dream of loveliness. Tall mirrors about the walls told her that she was very out of place, in her crude wash dress, amid so much silken elegance. It added to her loneliness and sinking down on the chaise longue she buried her head among the soft silk pillows and cried.

It was here that the Comte found her when he tiptoed into the room, impatient to claim his prize without further delay.

Brought to a consciousness of present surroundings by the Comte's devouring gaze, Manon lifted her head from the pillows. When she saw who was there she sat bolt upright with terror and covered her mouth to keep from screaming.

"Welcome my pretty little bird, to the nest I have prepared for you," said the Comte as his hand reached out and cupped Manon's chin.

"Don't!" she shuddered, striking his hand away and springing to her feet.

"Perhaps you like this better," and the Comte's arm went over Manon's shoulder, down her back and around her waist as he stepped closer.

With a heartrending cry Manon pulled away and retreated to a far corner of the room.

The arrival of Lescaut, attracted by her screams, only added to her hysteria. "You have told terrible lies to get me here. You are beasts—both of you! My own brother has tricked me!" Manon's hands went up to her eyes, to wipe away the blinding tears, and when she took them away she saw the Comte approaching, nearer and nearer, with that same terrible devouring expression on his face.

"Let me alone!" she cried pleadingly.
"Why should I? Don't you know that I have paid for you?" The Comte watched her greedily as he advanced.

Unable to stand the proximity of either man for another moment, Manon dodged away from the Comte and picking up her skirts ran out onto the balcony. Without a moment's hesitation she jumped over the low railing and raced across the lawn. Her only plan was to return to the comfort and happiness of Fabien's arms.

It was dark night when Manon reached the pension. Fear of being pursued and caught had prompted a cautious trip along unfrequented streets, so that when she reached their attic room and opened the door she almost collapsed with fatigue and anxiety. A great flood of moonlight coming in through the dormer window showed Manon that Fabien was not waiting for her. She looked about hopelessly and called his name again and again.

Aroused from a long quiet sleep by the sound of her mistress' voice Fabien climbed out of her basket and demanded recognition. Manon happily gathered the little pet in her arms.

Sick at heart over Manon's departure, Fabien walked the streets. Finally he was drawn back to the pension in the hope that she had returned. But looking up he saw their little windows all dark.

Should he go up there and wait for her? He started for the door, then stopped. It would be hopeless and a waste of time, besides he could not endure the room without her.

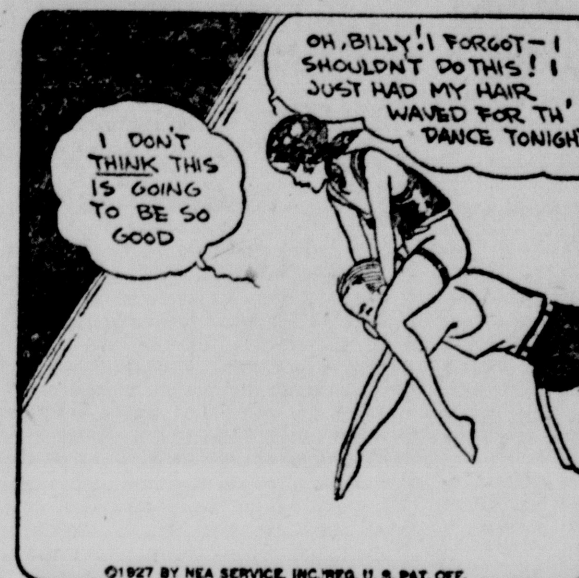

Fabien tragically turned away, little dreaming that at that very moment Manon was back in their little nest, calling his name, looking and longing for him with such a great need that it seemed he should have known and gone to her, in spite of the deceiving darkness.

Why was it that Fate again drew the lovers near; but played with her power and their future by keeping them in cruel ignorance of each other?

Marie was making her nightly rounds when she chanced to notice the attic door ajar, peering curiously in she was struck to see Manon.

"What you doing back here?" she asked.
"Oh, Marie, where is Fabien—I have come back to him."

FELT HIS OATS

Barlesville, Okla.—Oatmeal may be a nourishing and fattening food, but there is such a thing as too much, thinks Orville Morris, lately an inmate of the Washington county jail. Morris gained about 50 pounds during a year of incarceration. He requested that he be released before breakfast on his last day, so that he would not be obliged to eat the cereal that had been the main dish of his morning meal.

DUPONTS' FINGER
IN STEEL, MOTOR
COMPANIES SEEN

Capital of "Community of Interests" is Four Billions

New York, July 29—(AP)—A gigantic "community of interest," drawing together three corporations—United States Steel, General Motors and E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Company—whose capitalization ranges more than four billion dollars, is seen by Wall Street in the announcement to the stockholders of the Du Pont Company that it has purchased 114,000 shares of the common stock of the Steel Corporation.

The Du Pont Company paid approximately $14,000,000 for the stock and at a later meeting of the board of directors of the Steel Company, either Pierre du Pont or a representative of the Du Pont interests, it is understood, will take a place on the steel board. There have been reports that Pierre du Pont, now in Europe, might succeed E. H. Gary as chairman. This is not credited in best informed circles. Mr. Gary is ill, but is expected back at his office soon. No change in the steel chairmanship is at present contemplated.

The entrance of the Du Ponts into the Steel Corporation is welcomed by the house of Morgan whose relations with the Du Ponts have been very friendly. The Du Ponts own about 25 percent of General Motors and virtually control the company so that with the Morgan bank dominating the Steel Corporation and the Du Ponts controlling General Motors and the Du Pont Company, there is a linking up of industrial forces of gigantic magnitude.

Whether the federal trade commission will find in this reported "community of interest" a violation of the anti-trust law is something that Wall Street is unable to say.

Save your money each month by buying shares in the Dixon Loan & Building Association. Ask the Secretary, H. U. Bardwell, about its advantages.
